How the Southern Confederacy Went Up

(From the Matamoras Daily Ranchero [illegible])

Three short months ago it was indeed a glorious privilege to be an undoubted Confederate. Not a Confederate who had been forced into the ranks, for all such were only Confederates in necessity. Not a Confederate who was basking in the dollar and sent smiles of enrolling officers, for all such were under the ban of well founded suspicion. Not a detailed or contracting Confederate, for all such were well known to be making money out of the war. Not fifty and over years old Confederates, for the whole gray-headed tribe of them were indisputably nothing but a pack of old [illegible]. Certainly not enlisted Confederates, for it was well known that they went into the ranks just to keep from being conscripted. Not an exempted Confederate, for they were incontestably exempted for no other purpose than for [illegible] and general teasers, without being Confederates at all. Not sickly consumptive, disjointed Confederates, for there is no doubt they took sick, got the consumption or broke their legs just to keep out of the ranks. We assuredly do not mean Northern born Confederates from the highest officer to the lowest private in or out of the army, for all such labored under the most infernal ban of suspicion which any set of men undertook to pack. We could not possibly mean an official Confederate, for their's was too clear a case of robbing the country, soldiers' families and all. But an honest, undoubted, unsuspected Confederate, to be such an one was glory enough for any man three months ago. To have been such a Confederate at that time, however, would have required the banishment of every man and woman in the Confederate States, and then to have nailed up the Saviour, and possibly he would have suspected himself.

But now how changed the scene! The glorious privilege of being and having been a Confederate, free from suspicion is denied to no one. All that any one may claim of this recently disputed privilege is now awarded without the introduction of testimony. Even a Northern born man can now get a sight draft cashed for as much Confederate patriotism as he is willing to draw for. The stock in bank is inexhaustible, and none are so poor as not to have unfailing interest in it. So that the long contested privilege, so glorious in itself, has like the rains from heaven, fallen upon the just and unjust, upon the rich and the poor.

The Confederacy is dead, it was strangled in the house of its friends. It is as dead as the principles for which it contended—principles co-existing with the American republic. But the people of the once Confederacy have no ground to complain, for they were among the first to complain, for they were among the first to abandon them, they allowing them to be abandoned. They allowed every vestige of human rights to be ignored, under a promise of having them given back after the war. They allowed themselves to be robbed of their property, their inherent and natural rights, under the appalling delusion that it would strengthen their power of resistance. They tolerated the blackest act that ever disgraced a legislative record—unconstitutional and unholy—the Act of conscription with its aristocratic exemptions. An Act that forced the honest, industrial, laboring man from his dependent family to the ranks, without providing means of subsistence for his family, and excepting planters and their niggers, doctors, not one in ten of whom deserved a patient, and at best were but a social incubus, lantern jawed, canting, seven-by-nine, society disturbing preachers, and ever-meddlesome and dictator supporting editors. Exempted them for no other purpose than to combine wealth, talent and influence in support of the measure, and thereby force it down the throats of the people and the Courts of the country. That Act exempted three hundred thousand effective white men who could leave their families with princely fortunes, and every way provided with the comforts of life. It exempted from service of any sort, five hundred thousand powerful, able bodied blacks, viewing them in a sacred light, and throwing the burden of war and defense of the country upon five or six hundred thousand honest laboring men, whose families depend upon their toil for daily sustenance. Cruel, inhuman, diabolical Act, and cruelly, inhumanly and diabolically was it in many, very many, instances executed.

Added to this the people tolerated a pack of the most infernal vampires that ever sucked human blood, in the form of petty officials, little dirty tyrants, in official livery, who, under the pretense of robbing for the Government, robbed for themselves. From brigadier-general cotton law makers down to the most insignificant pet of the Government that was not fortunate enough to come under the exemption clause, a general grab was made at whatever was in sight. In every conceivable form robbery was carried on. Innocent men, honest Confederates, who happened to have some coveted piece of property, would no sooner be pointed out than would a pack of official curs start upon the track. The best men of the country were suspected expressly to drive them into opposition, or from the country. Confederate States receivers, none of whom have we positively known to settle with their Government, in many instances disgraced the name of man in their hen roost searches after confiscated property. All these State and Confederate State officials inaugurated a system of espionage and plunder never before equaled on earth. No man was free from suspicion, and no man dared to point back to the written Constitution and laws of the country; for there was no law or Constitution recognized by these petty tyrants. No one dared to suggest even the object for which the war was inaugurated, for to do so was conclusive evidence of disloyalty.

The soldiers who were fortunate enough to get furloughs for home would no sooner behold the work of official vampires than would they resolve never to return to the ranks. Nine times out of ten they would find that all they had left behind had been gobbled up, and they, in self defense, would commence stealing to get even.

Confidence between the people and Government was lost, for every new usurpation of constitutional authority only paved the way for another outrage. So soon as the Government openly violated the Constitution, both civil and military officers ceased to respect the laws and the soldiery, as a consequence, ceased to respect their officers or the persons or rights of the people. All there has been to the Confederacy, in the last year or two, was an intolerable military despotism and soldier anarchy. Under this weight it was impossible for the Confederacy to succeed. Its own weight was sufficient to crush it, and crushed it is, but not whipped.

A baser or more transparent libel was never perpetrated than that that the brave soldiers and people of the South have been whipped by the Yankees. The people and soldiery, having been despoiled of every Constitutional right, having given up their freedom and their liberty, and for the liberty robbing plea of "necessity," saw nothing to be gained by continuing the war. They had become worse off than slaves, and knew that any change could not be for the worse. They had seen all that was worth contending for disappear and refused by acclamation, to continue the struggle when every day was plunging them deeper into vassalage. The soldiers had got tired of fighting for niggers, as they conceived, when the Government would not let the niggers and masters fight for themselves.

The Confederacy is dead. With it passed away an army of official leeches sufficient to have sucked the life blood from any earthly power. The Yankees have them and should treat them with great tenderness and consideration, for they proved more potent in destroying the Confederacy than the armies of the United States.

The Confederacy is dead, and all that is left is the glorious privilege of being an unpardoned, unsuspected, unprosecuted rebel. [illegible] glorious privilege, after four years of [illegible] nightmare and infernal persecution.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 20, 1865

A Paradoxical Political System

In the Vicar of Wakefield George Primrose thought that the best things always remained to be said on the wrong side. Accordingly he went to work to frame up his three paradoxes which were to astonish the world. But he was not long in ascertaining that his unwonted ingenuities were not destined to accomplish a complete revolution in all the branches of science. The fame of Primrose as the paradoxical philosopher proved evanescent, but he has had many imitators since his day.

In one of his speeches, Cicero ludicrously describes Cato as having derived his whole theory of politics from the subtle themes of dispute—the mere logomachies—which the old doctors had proposed for the exercitation of the junior students in the stoic philosophy. There are not a few during these days who build their political faith on theorems equally as absurd as those which Cicero ridicules. Your modern "Democrat," instead of reading and considering the whole political history of his country, instead of ascertaining what the Government of the United States was prior to 1789, and making himself acquainted with the defects the present Constitution was meant to supply, bottoms his system of politics upon a few resolutions which were enunciated by one who had no part in the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and who was well known, both while in France and after his return to America, to look with disapprobation upon the change from a Confederation into a "more perfect union." To rest one's entire political faith on these few resolutions, especially when it is considered that they emanated from a person who was no admirer of the system of Government adopted in 1789, is like taking George Primrose's paradoxes as a guide in philosophy, or Cato's school propositions as the only just theory of politics.

The Revolutionists of France in 1790 proceeded upon a plan, in some respects not unlike that followed by the "Democrats" of our country at the present time. They took some of the maxims adroitly put forth by Rousseau and Voltaire, and upon these mere figments of fancy, given to the world only to attract attention or to try the talents of their authors, they gravely made the effort to lay the foundations of civil polity and rest the whole fabric of Government. This abortive attempt to do a thing which folly in its prime would be almost too sagacious to undertake, is precisely paralleled by the course which the disciples of the resolution of '99 have long pursued. The theology found in the Westminster catechism will scarcely suffice to make one learned in divinity; a dogmatic adherence to a few ambiguous propositions such as make up the resolutions we are speaking of, and an unqualified rejection of every thing that clashed with them will scarcely give any one an adequate idea of the properties of our Government.

So long as "Democratic" leaders can accomplish their purpose by promulgating these fallacies, they will not fail to spread them before the country. When men can be no longer misled by them they will speedily give them up to the fate which was met by the three paradoxes of George Primrose.

THE REASON.—Let us ask the Governor of Oregon why, if he believes the Emancipation Proclamation to be lawful and effective, he should call an extra session of the Legislature for the set purpose of ratifying a proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution, for the abolition of slavery in the Union, when the very identical thing has already done by Executive order, and thus inflict upon tax-payers the heavy charge which the extra session must cost the State?—Confederate Democrat.

For the benefit of the troubled editor of the Democrat, we shall take the liberty of answering this question. In some of the States slavery was abolished by the Executive Proclamation of January 1st, 1863. In others it has been abolished by the votes of the people. Two States, Kentucky and Delaware yet retain it. The Constitutional Amendment is to be ratified in order that slavery may end in the States last named, that the late rebels and their Copperhead friends may cease to vex the country with protestations about the illegality of the means whereby it is got rid of, and that the minions of oppression may not be able to make use of their "State rights" dogma for the purpose of re-enslaving those who have a right to be protected in the freedom that was solemnly promised them.

Somebody gives the following for advice: When attacked by a bloodhound, or any other dog, raise your left arm and let him seize it, then instantly grasp his windpipe with your right hand, and squeeze it with all your might, that will disable him in two seconds. He opens his mouth to grasp, loses all power and falls helpless. If you wish to kill him, keep your hold for a minute or two—he is done! You are ready for another. One at a time is all you need. I speak from experience with big dogs.

We find the above in the State Rights Democrat. It is presumed that paper derived it from a credible source. Having hunted men, women and children with bloodhounds for so many years, the Democrat and the people whom it admires so much, may be presumed to know all that pertains to the business. Could the negroes, whom it is the peculiar glory of the "chivalry" to hunt down with dogs, read the newspapers, the Democrat would not be likely to publish the above, lest the victims of this refined sport might learn how to escape from the ruthless pursuers.

We notice that the Copperhead papers are publishing a deal of stuff about the inhumanity of the measure which frees the slaves. They are contrasting their present condition with the happiness they experienced when they had to work under the smart of the driver's lash. Truly this is a wonderful opportunity for comparison. Even if the tales of suffering among the blacks which the advocates of human bondage tell of, be true, the negro is still better off than he was before. Man had better have no being than to exist in a state of absolute servitude.

NEGRO SUFFRAGE.—We think the Copperheads must desire negro suffrage, judging from the constant talk about it. If so, they are taking the very plan to get it. If they really do not want it they had better be silent.

APPOINTMENT OF SECRETARY.—A private telegram to Mr. R. G. Gilson, dated Washington, September 8th, informs him of the fact that his commission as Secretary of Idaho Territory would be forwarded on that day. This will be good news to the people of Idaho, who have been subjected to so many vexatious delays by the absence of officers from the Territory, or from the want of any officers either at home or abroad. But we are not now disposed to go over the old ground of complaint, but rather to congratulate ourselves that the Government does at last take notice of us, and furthermore upon the happy selection we have just now announced. Mr. Gilson has acted as private Secretary to Governor Smith since his first arrival in the Territory, and of course has had much to do with the office to which he is now appointed, and it is but simple justice to state that no one acting in an official capacity ever will give better or more general satisfaction than has Mr. Gilson to those having business with the office since his arrival. Always at his post of duty, agreeable and obliging toward every one, he gives the best assurance of making an efficient and capable officer. He was one of the first to go into the war, and served over two years in the regiment that went from his county in Ohio. He is not a politician in the common acceptation of the word, never having held an office before, nor asked for one, and since he is already located here permanently will not, like many others, be taken with a fit of disgust and leave the Territory because everything here is not as pleasant as could be imagined.—Idaho Statesman, Sept. 1.

(DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.)

DATES TO SEPTEMBER 17.

The Atlantic Cable

HALIFAX, Sept. 18.—Lieut. Gamble, R. N., of H. B. M. ship Wagent, in a letter to the Express says: The Wagent passed the locality where the cable separated and slacked, and with the best look out of officers and men saw none of the buoys. He concludes that if the Great Eastern's reckonings were correct, the buoys must have parted from the cable and drifted out of the ocean.

Riot Among the Negroes.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A riot took place at Hampton last Monday night among the negroes, which was quelled by a detachment from the District of Columbia cavalry. Twenty-one negroes were captured, all armed with revolvers, cutlasses, carbines or shot guns.

South Carolina.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Post has received a dispatch from South Carolina saying that the State Convention had not organized. Of all the delegates at least three quarters were original secessionists and active participants in the late rebellion.

Jas. L. Orr Pardoned.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The only pardons granted to-day were to Jas. L. Orr of South Carolina and Henry C. Wagner, of Georgia.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were nearly one million and a half.

Indian Treaty.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 14.—The following tribes to-day signed a treaty of permanent peace with the United States, as represented by loyal delegates: Osages, Seminoles, Creeks, Chickasaws, Cherokees, Senecas, Senecas, Shawnees, Choctaws and Quapaws. The treaty concludes as follows: "The undersigned do hereby acknowledge themselves to be under the protection of the United States of America, and covenant and agree that hereafter that they will in all things recognize the Government of the United States, as existing executive jurisdiction over them, and will not enter into any allegiance or arrangement with any State, Nation, Power or Sovereign whatever, than any treaty of alliance for the cession of lands, or any act heretofore done by them or any of their people by which they renounce their allegiance to the United States, is hereby revoked, cancelled and repudiated in consideration of the foregoing stipulations made by the members of the respective nations and tribes of Indians within the limits of the so called Indian country, that it will afford ample protection and security of the persons and property of the respective nations or tribes, and declares its willingness to enter into treaties to arrange and settle all questions relating to the growing out of former treaties with said nations as affected by any treaty made by said nations, with the so called Confederate States at such time in the future as may be appointed.

FORT SCOTT, ARK., Sept. 17.—Col. Parker and Senator Irwin, detailed to accompany the commission, leave here on Saturday for Bluff Creek, Colorado, where they will meet the Commissioners appointed to treat with the Arapahoes, Cheyennes and other Indians, on October 4th. M. Sanborn, Capt. Murphy, Kit Carson and Wm. W. Bent will also be there.

A portion of the Creeks signed the treaty of peace to-day. Delegates from the Camanches and a rebel delegation from Armstrong's Academy have arrived.

The War in Paraguay.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Montevideo brings Paraguay dates to July 26. We have additional details relating to the war between the Paraguayan republic on the one hand and Brazil, the Argentine republic and Uruguay on the other.

President Lopez had taken command of the Paraguayans in person but was moving more cautiously than at first, owing to several checks which his troops had received.

The Allies claim the navy of the Paraguayans was nearly annihilated in the battle of Richvillo between Paraguay and Brazil, and that on land the Paraguayans had also experienced a repulse. All the contending powers were however in motion, recruiting. All kinds of military preparations are in progress in every direction, but until the rain and cold gave place to more favorable weather, it was thought no decisive campaign would be commenced. There were 17,000 Brazilians in the field.

A Montevideo paper announces that the U. S. naval expedition of great strength will soon arrive on the South American coast, accompanied by commissioners whose duty it will be to demand and enforce non-interference with the free navigation of the Platte river by Brazil, and the payment by the government of that country of $400,000 as indemnity for the American vessels destroyed by rebel pirates in Brazilian waters. A Buenos Ayres journal however, says this story has no foundation in fact.

The city of Montevideo is said to be in a terrible condition owing to political affairs. Arrests were made every day. Burglaries, robberies and other acts of lawlessness were frequent.

The Freedmen in Arkansas and Mississippi.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Lieutenant Colonel Williams, of the Freedmen's Bureau, who in June last was dispatched upon a tour of inspection through Arkansas and Mississippi, reports in extenso from St. Louis, under date of August 9th, the main facts of general interest contained therein are, that there is no lack of employment for negroes at $20 a month for males, and $15 for females, with board. In addition, a large number are engaged in cutting wood for the yards along the Mississippi river, from which they are allowed considerable profit. The residue of the proceeds going to the support of the destitute of their race. The negroes who lease lands for cultivation are required to pay the same rental that parties do who apply distinctly to the Treasury Department. In one locality three freedmen's schools were established in October last, with an attendance of 300 pupils, which has been increased to 500, with an average attendance of 5,000 scholars. The number requiring support from the Government is reported to be everywhere diminishing. The teachers engaged in most of the schools for the blacks are paid by the Northern societies, and receive from $20 to $30 a month. Many of the inhabitants who have no lack of food, are very scantily supplied with clothing, and can scarcely get through the coming winter without assistance.

Southern Mails.

Recognition of Mexico.

The Tribune's correspondent says: "I am told by a person whose authority cannot be doubted, that the President and Secretary Seward look upon the recognition of Mexico as an act perfectly legitimate in itself, and which must eventually take place. This is with no prejudice to the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine, which the recognition of Mexico does not interfere with, and which will be reasserted with more strength than ever."

From the Rio Grande—Mexican Affairs—Murder of Rebel Refugees.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—New Orleans files of the 7th have been received. The Times' Brownsville correspondent says: The health of the colored soldiers continues bad. Sanitary measures are strictly enforced.

The Liberals at Matamoras are collecting a large force and will soon increase it by a union with the forces of Cortinas, Carvajal, Canales and Bolon. A skirmish took place on the Tampico road between the Liberal troops under Escobedo and a party of Imperialists under Jinorgano, having a wagon train in charge. The Imperialists were driven back to Monterey, and getting reinforcements they went out again, and were met by Cortinas' guerrillas and again driven back.

Four rebel Americans were barbarously murdered recently by robbers, one of whom is reported to be Parsons of Missouri, while another report makes it Col. Parsons of Texas.

General News.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—J. I. Ringwalt of the Philadelphia Press has been appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury an agent to visit Denver City, Colorado, to ascertain the best mode of transporting gold bullion by the Government from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic cities, and also to take measures to accommodate the miners with eastern exchange.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—The Kentucky Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in session at Covington, adopted, by a vote of 7 against 25, the minority report, which expressed a willingness to receive through the general conference overtures looking toward re-union. The majority reported favoring it.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—The Gazette had a Montgomery special dispatch which will be conservative, differing but little from that of Mississippi. Governor Parsons favors the action for the admission of negro testimony before the courts, and also for submitting the Constitutional amendments to the people.

Persons from Texas report everything quiet in the border districts. The negroes generally remain with their former masters, working as usual. Crops look well and promise a good yield.

Baton Rouge advices of Sept. 1st says that more than a hundred citizens have taken the oath under President Johnson's proclamation.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—A Montgomery special of the 12th, says the Convention met to-day [illegible] months' [illegible] were [illegible] Governor [illegible] ex-Governor [illegible] resolution was adopted [illegible] number [illegible] convention to restore state relations with the Federal Government, and a similar committee to report relative to its secession.

Such an event being unprecedented has excited public surprise. The latest intelligence says a new Cabinet has been formed under the Presidency of Viscount Castro.

The war between Paraguay and the Argentine republic shows no signs of termination. Rains had retarded military operations, but both parties were about to recommence on an important scale, large armies being raised by volunteers and conscriptions.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—The success of the new Merchants' Exchange is now beyond all question. Nearly the entire amount has been subscribed and the remainder tendered. The committee have been authorized to make the purchase of the building.

James L. Ayres and A. B. Fisher, two of the proprietors of the Daily Morning Call, were arrested last evening on complaint of Capt. R. J. Ryan, who charges them with doing him an irreparable injury by publishing an alleged libelous article copied from the News Letter of this city.

Hon. J. L. Ashley addressed a large audience at Platt's Hall last evening on the subject of reconstruction. Mr. Ashley's speech was well received.

The mining share market is comparatively active. Burning Moscow sold down to six dollars, being a decline of twelve dollars as compared with the corresponding board yesterday. This would seem to indicate that Burning Moscow is about to be overslaughed by the Ophir Company, the price of which advanced ten dollars.

Legal Tenders 72¼@72½.

Candles tend upward, sales 250 boxes, Knapp's, at 23½. A vessel of 1,000 boxes of Grant's at 22½ and to arrive, about 5,000 boxes of Grant's and Knapp's on private terms. Coal Oil has again sold higher, sales 1,000 gallons of Devoe's at $1 02, and 500 cases of domestic to arrive on the Robin Hood, private. Sugar—the local refineries have advanced prices. Yellow to 12¢ and 14 cash for whole and half bbls. Sales at auction—Rice—2,700 mats of China at $5 95@$7 17½ ₩ 100 lbs. Sugar—210 bales No. 2 China, $10. Tea—20 bales basket, 80¢; 400 bxs Young Hyson, 46¢; 60 hlf chests Oolong, 13. Flour scarce, the local mills having orders on hand for three weeks to come, and the market rules in favor of the seller. We quote superfine in qr and hlf sks at $4 12, and extra $6 25@6 50 ₩ bbl. Wheat—no change in the market, the demand continues moderately active, in part for export, $1 85 for very poor smutty; 1 80½@1 90 for ordinary to good; also previous to our last, not before reported, 1,025 sks chiefly to arrive, $1 75@$1 92½ ₩ 100 lbs, for inferior to strictly prime. Barley scarce and wanted, at full prices, sales 2,000 sks, 92½c@102½c ₩ 100 lbs for ordinary feed to prime for brewing. Corn, 100 sks, light new white Stockton sold at $1 87½ ₩ 100 lbs. HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—Mr. F. W. Sigsbee, a packer from Umatilla was robbed on the trail leading from Buena Vista Bar to Centreville last Monday night under the following circumstances. Mr. Sigsbee sold his train and merchandise last week for the sum of $[illegible] which was paid him on Monday night. Late in the evening he started with the money on horseback for Centreville alone. He had taken precautions to prevent any one from knowing of his departure. Some miles out from town he was suddenly startled by the appearance of a man stepping from the branches of a fallen tree near the trail, who instantly presented a shot gun at his head and demanded him to halt. Hearing a noise behind him he looked and saw another man with a shot gun presented. The man in front kept him covered with his gun while the other politely forced him to dismount and when off the horse stripped off the belt around his waist, examined his canteen, searched his pockets and helped himself to the contents. When he had concluded the examination he handed Sigsbee's pistol and canteen to the saddle, handed him the reins and ordered him to walk off. The moon was shining brightly. The robbers continued to stand on the spot until he was out of sight. He then mounted his horse and returned to town, having been absent about an hour and a half. Mr Sigsbee thinks he recognized one of the highwaymen.—Idaho World.

SUFFRAGE IN THE OLD SLAVE STATES.—It will be interesting and profitable at this time to look back some sixty years ago and see how the slave States managed the all important question of suffrage.

DELAWARE.—The Declaration of Rights prefixed to the Constitution of Delaware and part of that document declared:

Every freeman having sufficient evidence of permanent common interest with an attachment to the community hath a right of suffrage.

MARYLAND.—The Constitution of Maryland provided:

All freemen above twenty-one years of age, having a freehold of fifty acres of land in the county in which they offer to vote, and residing therein, and all freemen having property in this State above the value of thirty pounds current money, and having resided in the county in which they offer to vote one whole year next preceding the election of delegates for such county.

VIRGINIA.—The Virginia Declaration of Rights provides:

All men having a sufficient common interest with an attachment to the community have the right of suffrage.

NORTH CAROLINA.—The Constitution of North Carolina contains this provision:

"All freemen of the age of twenty-one years who have been inhabitants of any one county within the State twelve months immediately preceding the day of any election, and shall have paid public taxes shall be entitled to vote for members of the House of Commons for the county in which they reside.

GEORGIA.—The Constitution of Georgia declared that—

"The electors of the members of both branches of the General Assembly shall be citizens and inhabitants of this State, and shall have attained to the age of twenty-one years, and shall have paid tax for the year preceding the election, and shall have resided six months within the county."

TENNESSEE.—The Constitution of Tennessee allowed all free men, whether white or black, to vote, and made them do military duty.

SOUTH CAROLINA.—South Carolina, a State which never had a republican or democratic form of government, whose people never voted for President, where only the few wealthy were held capable of holding office, the Constitution of this State provides that—

"The qualification of an elector shall be every free white man who shall be possessed of real estate amounting in value to $100."

It appears from the foregoing that South Carolina is the only one of the Southern Slave States which never permitted negroes to vote within her borders.

SOZODONT.—An article that is at once a teeth preserver and breath purifier, and yet so pleasant and convenient to use its exceeding popularity does not surprise any one. Time has fully established the fact that the Sozodont possesses those excellent qualities in an eminent degree. It has legitimately acquired the right to a position upon every toilet table.

Brandreth's Vegetable Pills.—This medicine of enduring efficacy, is justly prized as a corrective of all disorders of the stomach and bowels, the common symptoms of which are costiveness, spasms, loss of appetite, sick headache, giddiness, sense of bloating after meals, dizziness of the eyes, drowsiness and cramping in the stomach and bowels. These symptoms being suffered to remain, a torpid state of the liver supervenes, and all the horrors of dyspepsia are experienced. Every function of the frame is to a certain extent prostrated, but a little perseverance in the use of BRANDRETH'S PILLS will soon restore the system from this state of misery. Two or three doses will convince the afflicted of their salutary influence. The stomach will readily regain its strength, a healthy action of the liver will soon take place, and instead of listlessness, heat, pain and jaundiced appearance, activity, strength and renewed health will be the blessed result. Brandreth's Pills are sold at 25 cents a box, enveloped in full directions. Purchase none unless the private Government stamp is on the box. See upon it, B. Brandreth, in white letters.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

—OF—

HAS BEEN USED FOR NEARLY

HALF A CENTURY,

WITH THE MOST ASTONISHING SUCCESS IN CURING

Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Croup, Liver Complaint, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Asthma, and every affection of the

THROAT, LUNGS, AND CHEST,

INCLUDING EVEN

CONSUMPTION.

There is scarcely one individual in the community who wholly escapes, during a season, from some one, however slightly developed, of the above symptoms—a neglect of which might lead to the last named, and most to be dreaded disease in the whole catalogue. The power of "medicinal gum" of the Wild Cherry Tree over this class of complaints is well known; so great is the good it has performed, and so great the popularity it has acquired.

In this preparation, besides the virtues of the Cherry there are commingled with it other ingredients of like value, thus increasing its value ten fold, and forming a Remedy whose power to soothe, to heal, to relieve, and to cure disease, exists in no other medicine yet discovered.

The unequalled success that has attended the application of this medicine in all cases of

has induced many physicians of high standing to employ it in their practice, some of whom advise us of the fact under their own signatures. We have space only for the names of a few of these:—

E. H. FINLEY, M. D., San Francisco, Cal.
E. BOYDEN, M. D., Exeter, Me.
ALEXANDER HATCH, M. D., China, Me.

W. B. LYNCH, M. D., Auburn, N. Y.
ABRAHAM SKILLMAN, M. D., Boundbrook, N. J.
H. D. MARTIN, M. D., Mansfield, Pa.

The proprietors have letters from all classes of our fellow citizens, from the halls of Congress to the humblest cottage, and even from beyond the seas; for the fame and virtue of WISTAR'S BALSAM have extended to the uttermost bounds of the earth, without any attempt on our part to introduce it beyond the limits of our own country.

TO CALIFORNIANS AND OREGONIANS.

After October 1, 1863, all genuine WISTAR'S BALSAM of WILD CHERRY for the Pacific Coast will be enclosed in a new wrapper which will bear the printed names of both SETH W. FOWLE & CO., Boston, Mass., and JOHN D. PARK, Cincinnati, Ohio, as well as facsimile of the signatures of "I. BUTTS," "SANBORN & PARK," and "H. WISTAR, M. D."

Marceline

Mademoiselle Picard had been at the head of an establishment of embroidery and lingerie for fifteen years. The establishment at first owed its popularity to Mlle. Picard's good looks, grace and neatness, and at the end of fifteen years Mlle. Picard did not forget that she had been beautiful and courted, and she could never make up her mind to remember that she was fifteen years [illegible] when she had attracted the attention of and secured the custom of the best people in Paris, when gentlemen brought more pocket handkerchiefs than she could embroider, and when bouquets and bons bons had been daily offerings. Mlle. Picard's remaining good looks were not improved by her ill temper, and when a cavalry sergeant, who had been her faithful adorer for five years, began to neglect her, she grew furious, and seeking on whom to vent her fury, had fixed upon the prettiest girl in her shop as her natural enemy on whom she could vent her rage. She had, however, neither the pleasure of a long nor a furious fight for Marceline, her victim, was a gentle, unoffending creature, who had submitted to fate from the hour she was born—a fate that had never known anything but toil, sorrow and privation, something bordering on starvation. No affection had sustained her, no mother's care had watched and waited for her on her return from her day's labor. A little orphan, living on the poor charity of poor people, she had then thought herself rich when she obtained the situation as an errand girl. From that position Mlle. Picard had taken her as an apprentice, and finding her endowed with patience and nimble fingers had patronized her.

Marceline had then soon six francs a week. Then she had taken a little room of her own, and by dint of extra work after the usual hours, she had contrived to furnish it.

Marceline was the very type of a Parisian grisette. She had an intuitive love for all that is refined, graceful and elegant. She herself, with her small features, her delicate complexion, her small feet and hands, were all in keeping with her taste, and when in her well-made chintz dress, her little collar and jaunty black apron Marceline sat in her tidy room working her delicate embroidery in her hand, she felt perfectly contented and happy. No anxiety for the future, no thought of illness or want of employment crossed her mind; she lived from day to day. All at once she finds herself, in a few moments, thrust into poverty and uncertainty. She had laid by no money, for she had just paid her rent, for which she had made weekly provisions, and all she possessed in the world was the five francs Mlle. Picard thrust into her hand as she turned her from the door.

Marceline went silently back to her room. She had no friends, she had never had a lover, she had no one to take counsel of. She was timid and retiring; she had never had to solicit work, and she shrunk away from the task; indeed she had not the [illegible] idea of how to begin to solicit.

Neither of a strong mind or constitution, but of a gentle nature, formed to bring blessings to the usual routine of a woman's life, but utterly unable to cope with extraordinary difficulties, Marceline looked to the future with a shudder; and so, weeping all day, and spending sleepless nights, she fell ill of a low fever that laid her helpless on her bed.

Week followed week, how many poor Marceline did not know, until she found herself pale, weak and miserable in the street, discharged from the hospital where the kindness of her neighbors had sent her, for the poor cannot give time to help each other, for time is their only capital. She crept back to what had been her home. All she possessed had been sold by the landlord for the rent, and the neighbors, beyond a first expression of surprise, seemed little interested in her return. None asked her what she was going to do, none offered her an asylum; all had their own preoccupations and sorrows, all had struggled with life and had but slender pity for her lot.

It was a chill, drizzly winter night when Marceline, feeling that she had out-stayed her welcome, crept from the room of the neighbor who had told her what had become of her poor belongings. Mechanically she walked along, but her strength was soon exhausted; and [illegible], with a strange fluttering at the heart, she leaned up against the stone pillar of a grand house, a memorial of past grandeur, in the Rue de la Seine.

She gazed up at the sky. There seemed no consolation even there, for it was dull and leaden looking. The streets were deserted, the lamps burned dimly, and the penetrating rain fell with a quick pattering sound into the dark gutters. Marceline could not weep; she scarcely suffered; a dim feeling of despair was creeping over her, and the first distinct idea that made its way through this mental chaos was a thought of the deep waters of the Seine, the Morgue and oblivion.

She was on the verge of that stage of madness induced by mental agony, added to physical privation, which leads to insanity; and with a deep sigh of relief, as if already the sacrifice had been accomplished, she began to move on, going to where the waters were flowing on relentlessly over many desperate hearts, which, century after century had there sought their refuge.

But her step is faltering, and her head swims. She can go but a few steps, and then, she is forced to lean against a lamp-post; but her strength fails her, and [illegible] she can [illegible] its support she falls, not to the ground, but on the arm which is stretched forth to save her.

"Poor girl, are you ill?" said a kindly voice in accents of refinement and gentleness. Marceline could not reply, but she tried to smile and open her eyes, but in that effort, with a smile on her lips she fainted.

When she revived, the genial atmosphere around her [illegible] first to revive her; then there came over her a sense of security, of escape from a great temptation, and a great danger, and she burst into tears.

"Do not weep, now," said the same kindly voice she had heard before, "all cause for weeping is past."

Marceline sobbed a little longer, then drying her tears, she looked up. A young man was beside her on the sofa on which she was lying. She did not think to note that he was young and handsome, so thoroughly charmed was she by the kindness that beamed in every feature.

"You are safe, my child, not only for to-night, but for all future. All I ask now of you is to know whether any are waiting and watching for you at home."

"I have no home. I have no friends, I have none on earth who care for me."

"Then look toward the future with security and joy, for you have found a friend and a home. This apartment is mine, but I will leave it to you, and now here is refreshment, then sleep till morning—sleep in security and peace."

"Let me tell you how it was that you found me as you did. My story is not a long one, but it is best that you should know whom you succored, and from what despair you saved me."

Marceline told her simple story, one replete with horror to her, but to which her listener lent but little attention, preoccupied as he was by the beauty of the face that was turned toward him.

When she ceased speaking, however, he took her hand in his.

"Marceline," said he, "since that is your name, again I repeat to you, your sorrows are ended; henceforth you have a friend that will never forsake you, and a sure refuge against all privations and sufferings will be provided for you."

"And you will get me work again, so that I can save enough to have another little room of my own? Oh! it was so pretty, and I was so happy all alone there in the evenings. The other girls used to tell me about operas and plays they went to, and the gay suppers they used to have; but I never was tempted to try them; the quiet atmosphere of my own little home was rest and enjoyment enough for me after the confusion and bustle of the day."

"You have never been anywhere, then—not to Mabille, not to Chaumiere, nor to [illegible]"

"I have no friends to take care of me like the other girls. I didn't like their companions; they were so rough and so noisy."

"Dear little innocent Marceline, you are a strange pearl to be picked up in the muddy streets of Paris; you must be guarded from all ill. Here you can remain in perfect safety. This room shall be yours. There are three more for me. Now sleep in peace, and good night."

Marceline, from her silent retiring nature, had [illegible] the intimacies [illegible] so that she was really perfectly convinced of the disinterestedness of her protector's kindness, and as he had desired her, she slept in peace the profound sleep that innocence and security brings.

Jules Volsin was not disposed to disturb it. He had a sincere admiration for the young girl, so different in all but appearance from the Parisian grisette. He belonged to a class accustomed to many loves and successes. He was a [illegible] [illegible] or traveling agent, a class of men generally young, good looking, well dressed, with plenty of money to spend, and no responsibilities, therefore calculated in every way to make what are called conquests, which means flattering the weak vanities of the other sex, and so misleading them.

Marceline was a study to him, and he really felt for her something like love.

She felt for him the deepest gratitude, but still cried for work and independence; but he persuaded her that he was looking for work for her, and meantime took her to all the places of public amusement in Paris.

So week after week went by. Marceline, though gazing on everything with a sort of childish wonder, was always happy when they spent a quiet evening at home. She was created for domestic life, for the duties of a quiet home. Her nature was pure and sensitive; she had none of the vanities or instincts that convert the grisette into the mistress.

But she was to be won by love, and that she soon felt for Jules, and her heart was ready to answer him the moment he told her, what he actually felt at the time, though he knew even then that he should not feel it long, that he loved her better than any woman on earth.

So there was no more talk of work. Marceline settled down contentedly and happily into her position. She had never been taught high principles, which restrain under all circumstances; the disgrace she had not the least conception of, for she had no friends, and it is the opinion of friends and society that makes disgrace. Besides, she loved Jules with the first pure love that hallows all, and makes the very sacrifice of yielding sacred.

Jules was extremely happy. Marceline, contrasted with the wild, extravagant female associates of his friends, was indeed, as he had said, a pearl. But love, [illegible], cannot prevent duty, and in the course of time Jules was ordered to the South of France.

"Albert," said Jules Volsin, taking his seat opposite to his most intimate friend, "I want you to do me a service."

"Well?"

"I am going away, and I don't know how to tell Marceline, so I decided on not telling her at all."

"Well?"

"But leave that task to you."

"You want, then to break with her?"

"Well, she's a dear little thing, but you know I shall be away a year, and one don't expect constancy in that kind of woman; little Marceline, thanks to me, knows life now; she is young and pretty; I have no fears of her. Besides, I leave her the furniture of her room and three hundred francs."

"I'll tell her I'll watch over her." "Jules, I think you have acted cruel to this girl, for I think she really loves you."

"Bah! she will soon forget."

Albert fulfilled his commission. He had judged rightly. Marceline did love Jules sincerely. His leaving her was a blow which plunged her into despair. Albert, for the first time, was brought in contact with true passion, and he conceived a profound admiration for the woman who seemed to feel what all other women he had known feigned.

He came every day; she [illegible] and to cling to him as a link between Jules and herself; she went back to her old desire for work and independence, but work was not easily found, and then a year's idleness, indulgence, and luxury had taken away her industrious habits and her energy. To work for five francs a week seemed absurd to her, who had spent money without calculating.

Gradually, she could not tell how, Albert took the place of his friend; he was not so rich as Jules, but Marceline was easily satisfied, and disposed to love any one who was kind to her.

But Albert, who had found fault with his friend's conduct, at the end of a few months ceased his visits to Marceline, and again she was thrown on the world.

By this time Marceline made a few acquaintances, and in the first days of her misery, a young and gay grisette, whom one of Albert's friends had brought to the house, came to see her.

"Why, Marceline, young and pretty, with this nice furniture and lots of fine clothes, why, you are a lucky girl—"

"If I can find work."

"Work? nonsense; leave the old and ugly work; you can find another protector—"

"Yes, you will leave me as Albert has done, as Jules did."

"Of course, but then—there are plenty more, and how old are you?"

"Nineteen!"

"Why, you have years before you, years before you need think or look grave."

"But when I am old, what then?"

"What then," said the gay friend, shrugging her shoulders, "why, leave that to chance. Come, I will call on you to-night with Henri, and you shall go with us to Mabille, eh?"

"Yes," said Marceline, but she was pale and sad, and scarcely replied to her friend's farewell.

"So," said Marceline, "this is my fate, the toy of one, then of another—my love misjudged, despised; no happiness, no security, at last contempt and poverty. Why endure the degradation, the sorrow, the humiliation of this life to come to nothing at last; better to rest in the still cold ground, with the flowers growing over my grave."

When Eliane and Henri came for Marceline that night, they found her cold and dead. Her pure nature had turned from the contamination of her life, and a few drops of poison had set her free.

The grass is growing on her grave, but no tears have fallen on it, for neither Albert or Jules has ever thought of her again. Both are married now, and respectable men, and no pang of remorse has troubled them. Why should it? the world would acquit them of course. Why are women weak and vain?

"Road Agents" Again.—By private letter from Virginia, Montana, dated August 30th, we learn from a reliable source that trains and squads of travel to the States are careful to look out for rascally "road agents," as they roll along from Virginia down to Bannock and Port Neuf. A few days before the above date, a train was threatened by a party of these highwaymen. On the 28th ult., within twenty five miles of town, (Virginia) two teams were attacked by four men with blackened faces. The two men having the teams were named Blodgett and Taylor. The "agents" killed Blodgett and robbed him of $640. Taylor escaped by jumping out of the wagon into the brush. These two travelers stopping on the roadside to get poles for wagon tongues saw the four robbers approaching on foot, and jumped into their wagons. Presently the robbers fired fatally for Blodgett. This man belongs to Ogden Hole, in this Territory.—Salt Lake Vedette, Sept 7th.

It is no harder for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a genuine "hardshell" believer in slavery to be cordially for the regenerated Union. With Slavery, they might have submitted with a sort of cheerfulness. Without it they are no more to be trusted than a bunch of lucifer matches in a powder magazine. The work of regeneration must be perfected without them and in spite of them. The exceptions will be found so trifling that they will be recognized as mere exceptions to the general rule. When this fact is made apparent the remedy will be applied. What that remedy shall be time will develope.

"A Marvel in Literature" is the sensation heading of an advertisement in the English periodicals, and it relates to a fact worth chronicling as showing the tendencies of the age. It is the production of a complete copy of "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress" for one penny. It is warranted to contain every word, including a memoir of the author, also Scripture references, and a frontispiece of John Bunyan in prison. No orders are taken for less than one hundred copies. The first edition will consist of one million.

Wants a Pardon.—The Rebel Governor Letcher, of Virginia, the man who was going to perish in we don't know how many "last ditches" rather than succumb to the "vulgar Yankees"—comes to Washington with hat in hand and obsequiously begs pardon. He has been the most venomous of rebels, but if he insists on becoming a decent man in his old age, there is no law to prevent it.

Genius and Labor.—Alexander Hamilton once said to an intimate friend: "All the genius that I have lies just in this. When I have a subject in hand I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I explore it in all its bearings. My mind becomes pervaded with it. Then the effort which I make is what the people are pleased to call the fruits of genius. It is the fruits of labor and thought."

A Danish writer spoke of a hut so miserable that it did not know which way to fall, and so kept standing. This is like the man that had such a complication of diseases that he didn't know which to die of, and lived on.

For the Woman.—To make an outcry and roll up your eyes because a woman lectures at all is fol de rol. If we can go to a theater and look at women falling into the arms of men, and to the opera and be perfectly delighted with half dressed women dance and sing, when a woman [illegible] decent apparel stands before us speaking sensibly and eloquently we ought to be able to listen without being very much shocked, or making a great ado about her being out of her sphere. God has made a minority of women as restless as men, women who chafe and are miserable unless they find occupation and a career outside of their affections. Of course you don't want to marry such a woman, Mr. [illegible], [illegible] would have a sorry time if you did; yet such women fill their own place, and do their own work in the world nevertheless. Why should we fret at them? The world's ill devolved ideals are not easily displaced. The Pythoness may shriek from her tripod, but we still fall down and worship the ancient divinity of womanhood. The invading woman, while she sharpens antagonism, may half longer admiration, but she cannot dethrone in our hearts the woman of our daily life, the mother who taught us to pray, whose name is a talisman to keep us from evil; the sister whose love is pure as that of the angels; the wife who is ours through all change, cheering the tired heart when it faints and the tired feet when they falter, giving her life to perpetuate our life, living for us and our children; the friend whose subtle intuition stands to us for wisdom, whose unconscious purity holds us aloof from sin, whose faith in us impels us to a higher manhood; whose fine femininity in its golden strength holds [illegible] the essence of womanhood,—fervor, tenderness and inspiration. Mannish women and womanish men, will jostle together till the day of judgment, but these women of our homes, with their tender voices and gentle eyes, will hold the deeper heart and destiny of the race till the end of time.

A rather good story is circulating in England apropos to the planting of an oak in honor of Shakespeare on Primrose Hill. The committee proposed to alter the name of the well known resort to "Shakespeare Hill," and during the oak ceremony, and afterward, the new name was buzzing about. It fell on the ear of an enthusiastically minded individual, who repeated it with certain alterations, owing to a defective education, to his friend, "Shakespere's 'Ill!" cried the enthusiast, with outstretched finger. "Lor'!" replied the practical friend, "I thought he was dead!"

The Democracy are a contrary set. When there was war they wanted peace, and now that there is peace, they want war with England, Mexico, France or "any other man." But the people have had enough of war for a time, and, while they will not brook an insult, they will not put a chip on their shoulder simply to invite some one to knock it off.
